WEDNESDAY, NOV. 12, 1873.

SHALL WE THROW AWAY THE TRADE OF EASTERN MAINE?

AN APPEAL TO THE BUSINESS MEN OF BANGOR.

For many months we have made no allusion to the Shore Line Railroad, further than to note the progress of negotiations for a terminus elsewhere than at this city. During this time we have been compelled to observe with keen regret the rapid growth of a feeling of alienation among the people of that section, towards Bangor; as the result of our strange repulse of their friendly advances for the establishment of direct commercial intercourse. To permit the permanent diversion of the whole trade of this large section in our immediate neighborhood, seems a blunder of such magnitude that we are unwilling to believe it is yet too late to prevent a sacrifice of our interests which we should never cease to regret. No railroad question of more importance to the future of our city has ever been brought before our people, and yet, we have never so signally failed to grasp the advantages offered. It would answer no purpose for us to review the circumstances which led to the failure of the proposition submitted to our voters. That our city was offered great advantages upon most favorable terms was understood by the business men of Bangor, and a lack of organized effort to bring a full vote alone prevented the large majority in its favor from greatly exceeding the requisite two-thirds. An energetic people should not give away before a single failure, especially one which demonstrated the popularity of the measure; and we now ask our citizens: Can you afford to let the whole trade of Eastern Maine be lost to us, without another effort?

The tendencies of the period since our vote upon this question, have been against us, and the people of the East are naturally sore at what they regard as shabby treatment. But, we believe they can be made to understand that the best portion of our community and a vast majority of our citizens are really desirous of cultivating intimate and cordial relations with the communities of the Eastern Shore. Is it not our duty to make a vigorous effort to avert the diversion of trade which ought to centre here, and for the loss of which we shall only be able to blame ourselves? The remarkable apathy of Bangor with reference to an enterprise of such important bearings upon our future business prosperity, has already elicited the wondering comment of people in other sections; and communities which expect to profit by our negligence are manifesting an active interest in the matter which should remind us of what is at stake. This city must rely to a great extent in the future, as in the past, upon the business which it can concentrate here as the distributing centre of this region of the State, and for this purpose it is essential that we should have railway connection with the communities, embracing eighty thousand inhabitants, lying within our natural business domain. If the Shore Line Railroad is permitted to strike the Penobscot eighteen or twenty miles below us, Bangor will be effectually cut off, and the whole trade of the East lost to us beyond recovery. It is impossible for any one who has regard for the future of our city to look with indifference upon the prospect of a through line from Calais via Bucksport to Portland and Boston, gathering in the trade of the whole coast region and leaving Bangor isolated from the communities with which it should have the closest business relations. That this is to be the result if we stand idly by, but it has not yet been accomplished, and we believe that our citizens should take hold of the subject at once and endeavor to devise means for averting such a blow to our interests.

A meeting of the Shore Line Directors is to take place at Cherryfield next week at which the future course of the enterprise will doubtless be definitely settled, and that meeting should not be allowed to pass without another effort on the part of Bangor. We know that many of our most industrious and public spirited citizens are deeply impressed with the importance of securing the terminus of this line, thus making Bangor the railway and business centre of all the surrounding territory; and we appeal to them for another determined effort, before it is too late. With the public sentiment of our city fully aroused upon this subject, we believe that we may yet convince the people of Eastern Maine that our interests may be combined with mutual advantage; but there is no time for delay.

As numerous paragraphs have recently appeared in our exchanges, having reference to the next election of a State Treasurer, some of which have spoken of Hon. S. C. Hatch of this city, as the representative of certain political interests, we feel it due to that gentleman to state that such intimations are entirely unfounded and inexcusable. In presenting himself as a candidate for the responsible position of State Treasurer, Mr. Hatch has appealed to no sectional or political consideration, beyond the fact that he is an earnest Republican, as the office is one which should be sought for itself, and bestowed with especial regard to the qualifications of the candidate. The ability which Mr. Hatch has displayed and the experience he has gained in various important positions of trust, together with his scrupulous attention to the public interests and his sterling integrity, have not only excited the warmest desire for his election here, where he is best known; but the most cordial assurances of confidence and support have been tendered by numerous friends in the various sections of the State. To all who have known him as a private citizen or in a public capacity, his election will be a guarantee of the faithful and efficient supervision of the financial business of the State. There are certainly few gentlemen who would so acceptably fill the place of our present honored State Treasurer.

The Portland folks are considerably agitated over the Boston Journal's despatch from Washington announcing the proposed consolidation of Collection Districts, in which it was stated that Maine would be divided into three Districts with headquarters at Eastport, Bangor and Portsmouth." The Advertiser says: "It will be seen, if the Journal is to be trusted, that the commission recommend the discontinuance of the Portland Custom House; this being, according to the Journal, one of the small ports which have outgrown their usefulness since the introduction of steam vessels." Out of consideration for the feelings of our friends at the Seaport, we treated the name as a typographical error and gave Portland a Custom House, which we hope they may be allowed to retain if they behave well.

Our neighbor has taken to figures again, and fairly eclipses those tables of last year which liberally gave Grant a dozen or more of electoral votes. This time he figures the Republican party out of existence by a process that is positively beautiful in its simplicity. In one column is placed the vote for President Grant in 1872, and in another our mathematician puts his personal estimates of the Republican losses in 1873. It will be perceived that it is only necessary to use generous figures in estimating the losses to produce a striking result. The rule followed by our neighbor seems to have been to set down those States which have not yet been heard from, of which have held no election, at an average loss of 40,000 to 50,000; and the footings is both delightful and instructive. We wonder that the author of this easy method did not go further and prove that there never was a Republican party, a war of rebellion, or a newspaper named The Democrat.

Some of the laboring men who are thrown out of employment and doomed to experience a winter of idleness and suffering, sold their votes a year ago, to ring managers of the administration party, for a few paltry dollars temptingly held out to them, and now, they will have an excellent opportunity to count up the profits and losses of the transaction.—[Maine Standard.

This imputation upon the integrity of laboring men is worthy of its source and that class of citizens will probably be glad to know the estimation in which they are held by Democratic organs. But supposing the charge true, we are puzzled to imagine how the parties would have been better off had they sold out to the other side, unless the price was higher.

The N. Y. Tribune, which has started the most of these "stories" is "glad to be able to say that the stories of an offer of the Chief-Justiceship to Mr. Roscoe Conkling, or to any one, are unfounded. Up to this day the President has made no tender of the place; and he is as yet entirely uncommitted to any one. If the final appointment shall show equal respect for the great office with the President's conduct concerning it thus far, we shall have special reason for satisfaction."

THE CUBAN MASSACRE. A letter from Havana, dated the 5th, gives the following account of the execution of the Virginius prisoners at Santiago de Cuba: The four prisoners were shot at a place made famous by previous executions and in the usual manner of kneeling close to the slaughter house wall. All marched to the spot with firmness. Bembetta and Ryan showed a marked courage, although the former was slightly affected toward the last. The two others were quite broke down before they were bandaged, but Ryan kept up to the last, never flinched a moment, and died without fear or regret. Bembetta and Ryan were killed at the first discharge.

The officers of the steamer Cuba, which arrived at New York Thursday, from Havana, state that the news of the capture of the Virginius was received there with great joy. It is also stated by the officers of the Cuba that the financial and commercial condition of Havana is deplorable. The panic in that city is affecting the people in addition to their intestine troubles. There is an entire lack of confidence among the people with regard to each other, and business is almost entirely at a standstill.

The question of another regiment of militia is mooted, and to our surprise the Bangor Commercial supports this proposition. Is not this the first move towards the Prussian system, and toward the worst part of it?—Portland Press.

The Press may yet see our neighbor dashing up Biddle street at the head of a brigade.

The Boston Post says:—"From three to five years is the period generally held by our best political economists to be the proper term for effecting resumption. There is an immense amount of indebtedness to be reduced first, and it is essential also to secure a sufficient reserve of gold in the country."

The Springfield Republican thinks that "probably a surgical operation will be necessary to get the option out of Mr. Allen G. Thurman's head that he is in danger of being the next President."

REVIVAL OF SHIPBUILDING. The forthcoming report of the Register of the Treasury will show that the general impression as to the improvement of late in our shipbuilding interests is abundantly confirmed by official statistics. The amount of tonnage built during the year exceeds that of any year since 1857, being 350,240 tons, and comprising 2,471 vessels, or 628 tons more than in 1872. Twenty six iron vessels have been built during the year, three of which were ocean steamers of the largest class. The total increase of tonnage is 258,280. These are certainly very gratifying facts. Unless the present period of monetary depression should be more severe and protracted than there is now any reason to apprehend, the progress of our shipping interests must soon restore us to the old national position and enable us to recover from England the advantages she has been enjoying for some time.

The Milwaukee Sentinel says of the Wisconsin election: "It is evident that the Republicans, in many localities, have neglected their duty, while it is equally evident that the liquor interest has made a united and desperate effort to gain control of the State. Of this purpose on the part of the whisky combination the Sentinel has all along given notice, and the correctness of its conjectures is sufficiently substantiated by the result in Milwaukee City and County."

NEWS BREVITIES.

Internal revenue receipts Tuesday were $194 815.

The Southampton's steamer took out 850,000 in specie for New York, Tuesday.

Ex-President Stockwell denies in toto the charges of irregularity in Pacific Mail.

A movement is now maturing to the Western States for a union of Farmers' Granges and Labor Reformers.

Insurgent prisoners captured during a recent engagement in Cuba were shot by the Government forces.

The Quindero, a Boston ship, from Valparaiso, is ashore on Cape Cod, three miles north of the Highland Light.

An attempt will be made at the ensuing session of Congress to secure permission to dispose of the Indian Territory not used or required for cultivation by the Cherokees.

Royal orders have been promulgated relieving General Von Roon of the presidency of the Prussian ministry, and appointing Bismark in his place, and Herr Camphausen, minister of finance, vice-president.

Another bank defalcation in New York has just come to light, the fact transpiring that on Tuesday last the cashier of the Security Bank of New York, disappeared with $25,000. No measures have been taken to apprehend the culprit, because his bond and his friends' purses will cover the bank's loss.

The bankruptcy case of Jay Cooke & Co., at Washington, D. C., came up in court again Monday, but was once more postponed. It is said there is a strong feeling among the creditors against the firm growing out of a belief that the firm is not acting in good faith.

THE TWENTY-SIXTH ANNUAL SESSION of this Association will be held

At CITY HALL, in Bangor,

Commencing on TUESDAY, November 18th, at 9 o'clock A. M., and closing on FRIDAY EVENING, November 21st, under the direction of

Prof. GEO. F. ROOT, of Chicago.

The Hall has been refitted and will present a very attractive appearance.

Tickets of membership, one dollar; Single admissions during the sessions, 25 cents. To the closing Concert, 50 cents. Tickets to be procured of the Secretary, or at the door of the Hall.

Books for the use of the Convention, free. Church Music, Glee and Chorus practice, Vocal Drill, Solo and Quartette Singing, Forenoon, afternoon and evening sessions daily.

Each membership ticket purchased will entitle the owner to a copy of the "Joy,"—the new book to be used. This will enable the singers to become more familiar with the music to be practiced by having it with them to look over out of the Convention, and will also help to carry the good effects of the work home with them after the Convention is over.

That the Social Hour may present variety and interest, all who will take part in individual performances are requested to come prepared, and report early, that their pieces may be properly placed. Report or send word to the Conductor or Committee on Social Hour every afternoon.

It is believed that the decision to have this year a convention for musical enjoyment and thorough drill, instead of a series of performances, will meet the approval of a large number of the teachers, choristers and singers of this part of the State.

Of our Conductor we need not speak. He has always been cordially welcomed among us, and won the commendation of all. We believe we have "the right man in the right place."—Any one who will give us new music and new practical ideas, that we can carry into use to bring, our choirs and our homes.

From return tickets to those coming by railroad or steamboat. Persons wishing to secure boarding places will please apply early, by mail, to Mr. E. F. Bradbury, Bangor, or engage them through their friends.

MAINE NEWS.

FROM BELFAST.

THE GORDON MURDER TRIAL—OPENING FOR THE PROSECUTION

BELFAST, Nov. 11.

The Gordon murder trial was resumed this morning in the presence of a large crowd of spectators. The aged mother of the prisoner occupied a seat by his side. In his opening remarks upon the importance and solemnity of the duty Nearly twenty years had elapsed since a trial for murder took place in this community, but in a single summer's day our sense of security was destroyed and we stood already almost unequalled in the annals of crime. Judge Virgin then gave us a painful notoriety. Murder was too mild a term for the deed which suddenly swept into eternity a father and mother and child But one person could speak upon the horrors of the scene and it was for the jury to determine whether John T. Gordon was that person After a definition of the law which governs the case, a general opinion of the expected evidence, which is purely circumstantial, was given at length, after which the prisoner's counsel the witnesses for the State were excluded while he testimony of those most material was taken.

THE TESTIMONY

John A Ward aged about 22, the hired man and an inmate of the house where the murder took place was first called. He testified that the prisoner retired alone early in the evening but retired the deed was committed. At about three o'clock witness was awakened by the cries of the children and discovered that the house was on fire. He alarmed his neighbors and the flames were soon extinguished without damage. A bloody axe was found at the entrance of the room where the victims slept The prisoner was first to enter the street He requested witness to assist in clearing the house and a few articles were removed. The mangled bodies were then discovered by witness and dragged out of the burning bed The prisoner assisted in putting water and upon inquiry for Mrs. Gordon and wife answered that they were burning up. He appeared excited and acted strangely Under objection witness testified that a dog which belonged to the deceased man and which was accustomed to bark at strangers made no noise. The examination developed nothing new, and at this close the Court adjourned until to-morrow morning when the bloody axe will be produced.

WALL STREET CHEERFUL.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11. All the morning papers dwell on the improved condition of affairs in Wall street was in town yesterday that he believed the bottom had been reached and that the press could do much toward restoring confidence. Referring to the threatened panic of 1860, he said that he had sold large sums of gold, as much as a million dollars in one day, and by this course, believed he averted the panic. He said he sold gold secretly upon that occasion.

EX-SECRETARY MCCULLOCH

THE RAILROAD STRIKERS LEAVING THE UNIONS.

KNOXVILLE, Nov. 11.—The late strikers on the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia railways, including engineers, machinists and blacksmiths, have withdrawn from the Unions. The engineers in a published card acknowledge their error and say they have determined to immediately withdraw from the organization known as "The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers." The machinists and blacksmiths have also signed a published card to the same effect withdrawing from The Machinists and Blacksmiths Union" The trains are all moving regularly and everything is perfectly quiet.

NEW JERSEY.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL COMMISSION.

TRENTON, Nov. 11. The Constitutional Commission met to-day. Mr. Swayze offered a series of propositions to elect all Judges of the Supreme Court by the people, to abolish Court of Chancery and give to the Supreme Court appellant and equity powers; to make the salary of the Chief Justice $10,000; to divide the State into 7 judicial districts with a judge for each. He also proposed to have a judge for each County and to abolish all Common Pleas judges and to elect Prosecutors of Pleas. The proposition to limit sessions of the Legislature to one in two years except when convened for special objects by the Governor was lost. The proposition to limit terms of judges of the Supreme Court during good behavior was lost. A proposition preventing members of the Legislature from receiving any appointment from the State or United States while members, was adopted. The Women's Suffrage proposition was lost. A proposition to present commissioners when lands are taken for private purposes from assessing benefits against owners of land was carried.

THE VIRGINIUS CASE.

REPORTED INTERVIEW WITH SECRETARY FISH.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11 The Herald's Washington correspondent represents Secretary Fish as making the following statements to him in an interview yesterday The Virginius is a complicated case. The Government cannot afford to take steps in the matter until the facts are officially presented to it. When they are presented you may rest assured that it will act with the utmost diligence and celerity. Mr. Fish then reverted to

THE AUTHORITIES AT MADRID.

He said he believed that those controlling the government were good men, in fact he knew them to be good Republicans. "Spain," said he, "has made a great many concessions upon this request of this Government, and I am satisfied that they would make full reparation for the Virginius capture if it was demanded." You see," said he, "Spain is sensitive, its rulers do not like to be told they must do this and so upon the demands of the Government, they must be handled delicately They are stubborn enough to resent an absolute demand but will readily comply with a request."

CUBAN AFFAIRS.

Mr. Fish then spoke of the condition of affairs concerning the Cubans, first stating that he knew that the Spanish Government did not sanction the spirit which prompted the Spanish volunteers to speedily execute the Virginius captives. He said it was cold blooded murder and no one of sound judgment pretends to apologize for the butchery, "but," said he, "the Cubans themselves are a misguided set. They have had

PRESUMED PATRIOTS

running loose in New York and Washington cities, who had they been of sterner metal, would have been fighting for liberty on the island instead of manufacturing useless and pseudo enthusiasm in those cities. No one denies that Ryan had his conferences here in the commission of the Cubans. If an American is willing to enter the service of a foreign power he does it at his own risk, and must right at every turn which proves inimical to his own interest or life to ask the intervention of a government which he has voluntarily left to battle for another power

THE CUBAN CAUSE.

Mr. Fish then expressly stated that he was in sympathy with the Cuban cause, and in speaking of their wants he said: They want a leader of good judgment and rare qualities. They need also supports. Why, to-day they have not a seaport and are literally shut out from the world. Every article of food or munition of war is smuggled through Spanish waters They have no means of communication These Cubans are too enthusiastic and actually want the United States to espouse their cause de facto They would have us do what England dared not do during the War of the Rebellion. They want us to build ships and land armed expeditions on their coasts. This England never did; true she fitted but one or two privateers which did considerable damage, and for which she paid $15,500,000, but in all our troubles she never fitted out an armed expedition to land on our coast."

UNREASONABLE DEMANDS.

The Cubans come to this country, enlist recruits for their service, raise money, attempt to negotiate bonds, and loans, and yet want the Government not only to accord to them belligerent rights but to commit no overt act against Spain of arming and putting out ships to land supplies for them, when thus far they are powerless to maintain a solitary seaport. I say again I sympathize with Cuba but cannot consistently with my sense of duty and responsibility render aid in any manner which will conflict with the comity of nations. I want to see better metal from Cuba than has yet been sent among us, before I can hope to hear of their ultimately achieving their independence."

ANOTHER TRENT AFFAIR.

"The status of the Virginius, if it comes under the cognizance of the United States, is very much similar to the boarding of the English vessel containing Slidell and Mason by Commodore Wilkes.

THE BLOODTHIRSTY VOLUNTEERS.

The trouble the United States has had to contend with does not originate with the Madrid Government, it is the Volunteers of the Island of Cuba, who are a bloodthirsty, relentless and unforgiving set. If the Spanish Government would only cut their throats it would be a good thing for Spain I mean politically, not physically I have hopes that they are to be subdued as I have received intelligence that the Minister of the Colonies, a able man, armed with great power, is now en route to Cuba on inspection of the real condition of affairs on the Island of Cuba I am satisfied his inspection will have a salutary effect and that in a fortnight I will be advised that a check has been placed upon their life-sacrificing propensities

NO MORE EXECUTIONS.

"One thing the United States Government has far has accomplished is that there will be no more executions. Of course we cannot bring back life, but one thing you can rest assured has been accomplished and that is that no more executions will take place.

SANTA ROSA'S CASE.

"I read in the papers that Santa Rosa has been executed. I have received no official intelligence confirming the same but I am inclined to believe it. He has given me a deal of trouble He was once before condemned to death as a pirate, and I am not sure but that he came under that provision After consulting a ream of papers—I do not exaggerate when I say a ream of paper—and numerous cable despatches, this Government secured his release. He wrote me a letter only a few weeks ago saying that he owed his life to me. I think he is a great fool if he went down there again

FEARS OF FOUL PLAY

A Washington special says that fears are entertained here that the Spanish Volunteers have purposely cut the telegraph wires between Havana and Santiago to prevent President Castelar's orders, forbidding the execution of the other prisoners from reaching the latter place.

STRONG VERDICT AGAINST RAILWAY OFFICERS.

A coroner's jury has rendered the following strong verdict upon a recent fatal railroad accident in Boston:

"That said Nathan J. Cole came to his death from injuries caused by striking his head against Harvard Street bridge over the Boston, Hartford & Erie Railroad, while the freight train on which he was employed was passing under said bridge, he being at the time upon the top of a car engaged in duties of this position. The responsibility of his death rests upon the managers of the aforesaid railroad, in that they have neglected to replace the bridge guard that should have warned the deceased of his danger, though it has been destroyed for months. It is in evidence that a large portion of the railroad bridges upon this railroad have either been destroyed or are in such condition as to be useless." This state of affairs, is, in our opinion, an indication of a reckless disregard of human life, neglect of duty on the part of the officers of the road utterly without excuse and deserving of severest censure."

VIRGINIA.

DEMOCRATS GAIN ONE LEGISLATOR.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11. A Richmond special says that the returns from all counties show that the General Assembly will be as follows: Senate—Conservatives 23 and Republicans 10; House of Delegates—Conservatives 100, and Republicans 32. Official returns from 87 counties and cities and semi-official returns from the remainder, except 3, give Kemper for Governor, 26,540, a Conservative gain of 3,503.

DASTARDLY ASSAULT.

RICHMOND, Va., Nov 11. Judge Underwood was assaulted here to-day by W. N. McVeigh, the former owner of property in Alexandria, Va., which was purchased by Judge Underwood under the confiscation act But few blows were administered by McVeigh and Judge Underwood made no resistance whatever. McVeigh called the Judge a hypocritical scoundrel and charged him with robbing him and making his family paupers

SELECT READINGS. The Hartford (Conn) Courant thus speaks of the lady elocutionist who is to read in this city to morrow evening —

The reading of Mrs. Edna Chaffee Noble, on the occasion of the Scott Centennial, gave an exhibition of her delicate talent and culture, and she received, as she deserved, the warmest applause of the hundreds who listened to her.

THE FIRE, which was seen in a southerly direction from this city Monday evening, proves to have been a house and barn owned by Mr. Charles Burr, and lately occupied by Edward Moran. The latter lost five tons of hay, a horse and cow, several vehicles, etc., not insured. The buildings were insured for $300. Some bones were found in the ashes of the shed, and it is not known as yet whether they are the remains of some tramp or are animal bones.

RECEPTION. One of the most charming social events of the season was the reception last evening at the rooms of Dr Babcock, in Kenduskeag block The Dr. was assisted in receiving the guests by Miss Babcock, Miss Blunt and Miss Bragg, and a large and merry party graced the spacious and elegantly furnished apartments. Music for dancing was provided by Kimball, refreshments were served by Fraser, and nothing was lacking to make the affair thoroughly enjoyable in every respect.

PROF. TRIPP'S LECTURES. The fourth and concluding lecture of the historical series delivered by Prof. Tripp in Music Hall, was attended last evening by a large audience. The subject, Lamartine and his time, furnished the lecturer with an abundance of material from which to weave an interesting theme, and to say that he succeeded admirably would be but faint praise A more interesting biography it would be difficult to find, and the lecturer illustrated his text with word pictures, vivid and realistic The eventful career of the poet-orator was sketched with fidelity, and the attention of the audience was closely engaged from beginning to close of this lecture, which has been justly termed "the gem of the course."

Prof. Tripp has nearly completed a series of lectures at the State College, and this evening begins another at Orono, where, as here, he will no doubt be greeted with good audiences.

HENRY THE FIRST Persons interested in poultry breeding will find much to interest them at the establishment of Albert Noyes, Esq., corner of Ohio and Fourteenth streets, where he has a large flock of fowls of eleven different breeds. His hen houses are fitted up with all the improvements, each breed having a tenement of its own, with gravel floor, plenty of light and roosting room, nests so arranged that they can be inspected and reached without disturbing the fowls, from the long walks running the whole length of the buildings, ladders for the weary chickens to walk up to their roosts—in fact, everything so complete that the biddies must imagine themselves in a hen heaven. The north sides of the buildings have double walls filled in with sawdust, and the south sides display as much glass as a conservatory. One is tempted in these panicky times to envy the occupants of these comfortable quarters, and sing —

SUPREME JUDICIAL COURT

(OCTOBER CIVIL TERM.)

HON CHAS. W. WALTON, Judge, Presiding
EZRA C. BRETT, Esq., Clerk of Courts
J. D. PULSIFER, Esq., Stenographer.

Monday Nov 10th—Calvin Seavey M D vs Melvin Preble M.D.

Declaration—For that the said defendan on the 1st day of February last past, with force and arms, broke and entered the plaintiff's house, situate on Cumberland street in said Bangor, and being entered, did strip and tear from the walls of said house, all the paper thereon, and in removing said paper did also mutilate and destroy the plastering of said walls and other wrongs then and there did to the damage of the said plaintiff's house, as he says in the sum of $100.

Plea—Not guilty. And for brief statement, the premises were in the possession and occupation of one Andrew J. Briar, pl's tenant, that said Briar, wife and two children had been, immediately prior, sick with the small-pox; that deft attended the Briars, professionally, as a physician; that he gave such advice on matters touching the spread of said disease as their own well being and the common safety to the neighbors, in his judgment, required; that having entered by license he is not liable for the trespass; that he did not personally commit the trespass or order or direct it to be done by any other person; that whatever was done was necessary and proper and therefore no trespass.

The Briars, husband, wife and two sons, testified in substance, that Dr. Preble told them the wall paper of the house must all come off before any of the inmates were allowed to go abroad. Doctors Seavy, Brown, Coe, Field, Morison and Hill testified that it their judgment it was not necessary to remove the paper; never read of such a thing in books nor heard of it before in practice.

Deft. says it was the dirtiest house that he was in last winter while attending 107 cases of small-pox; that Mrs. Liscomb, the nurse in attendance, employed by the city, thought the paper ought to be removed and asked his advice, and that he advised her that it ought to be removed, that he had but one conversation with Mr. Liscomb about the matter, at Liscomb's, that he was not present when the paper was removed; and was not in the house when the paper was removed, other than on the occasion of this suit. Drs. Preble, Seavey, Jarvis, and Blaisdell, testified that the removal of the paper was a prudent precautionary measure.

Tuesday, Nov. 11th. Ephraim C Sweet et al. vs. Daniel Dunham account annexed and delivered—$30 71

The plf appears and demands trial. Defts counsel wants delay for his client to come in and tell his story Delay not granted. Plf puts in proof of goods sold and delivered amounting to $18 95, and goods loaned and delivered, amounting to $20 76 in all $39 71.

Defense—That you have proved $18 95 for goods sold and delivered; but the other item, $20 76 is for goods loaned and delivered, which is a variance, for that items might legally be stricken from your account, which would reduce it below $20, and to confer costs; but I have no malice I consent that the jury may overlook the distinction between goods sold and goods loaned, and give him his costs.

AN END

BY ROSE TERRY.

I have had all—over and in that all,
Like the sun at work of fire in a man's eye,
One little mote did crawl
At I stirred and lay, till with eternity
Strait-girdled closely to measure out a pall
Where I might lie

Over me, as the great hungry sea
Is with the feeble force to reach,
Nor foam nor calm nor the still voice of birth
Nor the pale whisper bitter love from me
Turned forsook.

All—as of earth in sequence of their birth
Sang the joy I never lips and ears disdain
With the sad sigh of mirth
Wrought for no worth
I have had all—I had not a pain

As in a cup where the brown night mists sag
Under the heavy under the perfume,
One little regret choke up
And through all that bloom foretells the seed to bloom,
So my unsated thirst in each drained cup
Found darking room.

Let the sword hang over me this cool
Let it follow where two bleeding feet
Before the stern have trod,
And as earth sweet is finite, incomplete
Let the less joy less human one, complete
Heaven and rest.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

[Concluded.]

When she was arrested she was wearing a pair of carpet slippers belonging to her colored servant and not a slipper or shoe of any kind belonging to her could be found about her house. Inquiry was made at a number of the shoe stores in Indianapolis, and it was ascertained that a boy had sold Mrs. Clem a pair of No. 5 gaiters a few days before the murder. The boy was requested to get a pair of the same size of the same manufacture. They were procured, and a careful measurement showed that the heels were too deep by the width of the heels when shod. The shoemaker was then sent for, and he identified the heels of a pair of gaiters he had altered for Mrs. Clem, and upon being questioned as to the new pair in a similar manner, he removed a portion of the heel that had been done for her, and when that and the gaiter fitted the traces were the defendant's perfect. The servant girl swore that she saw Mrs. Clem's new gaiters lying on a bed in the house a day or two before the murder, that she saw the same gaiters soiled and in daily on the porch the morning of the murder, that Mrs. Clem passed out by that porch, and that they were the same gaiters she wore.

It was also proved that Mrs. Clem was seen on the street with Young and wife as they were going in the direction where they were murdered, the wife soon of the murdered and one witness who had known her and her brother-in-law since childhood met them coming home in a buggy from the direction of the murder, at a rapid pace and swore that they refused to recognize him.

The most remarkable feature of the case however, and one that has excited a curiosity that will not be allayed until the guilty parties come and explain it, grew out of the peculiar and mysterious financial transactions which were carried on between Mrs. Clem and Young, and other prominent citizens of Indianapolis for months prior to the murder, and up to the very day of its commission. Young, the murdered man, had been a carpenter, a hardware store, and was known to be poor. Suddenly he gave signs of wealth. He purchased property bought and sold real estate, changed notes, and loaned his former employers that he was engaged in business that was realizing enormous profits. He borrowed large sums of money that carried rates of interest, invariably securing the notes and leases repaid them before the obligations matured. He kept a large bank balance, and one of the Indianapolis national banks gave him established a credit that enabled him to procure the indorsements of some of the leading business men of the city. He opened his business, and when asked by his former employers what he was doing, he put them off with evasive answers. He was murdered September 12, 13 and $2,000 or $3,000 in paper and/or gold in bags on the 11th. The notes were all paid by his indorsers. He was seen on a bank the day he was murdered, with Mrs. Clem's signature, and one witness swore that Mrs. Clem that Young had given her $1,000 in money on the day of the murder. These financial transactions of a character created a period of six months, and during the whole time he was visiting Mrs. Clem as often as two or three times a week and always when her husband was at his carpet store.

Mrs. Clem's husband never met Young, and never knew that his wife was acquainted with him, and after the murder Mrs. Clem would on the bulletin board of the hotel for three times a week, to carefully watch for a letter, and when there was not to inquire of Mrs. Clem and Young if they would be in to adjourning room when they would be engaged in conversation and writing for a few minutes. Young testified by her sister-in-law about the letter to her business relations with him and put her off with indefinite answers. Mrs. Clem and Young's third pleasure ride occurred on the 2d of October, when they were driven by Abrams, who purchased the gun, began to converse about loaning and borrowing money, high rates of interest, kept a respectable house in town, paid his bank paper promptly, and so on to a good portion of his conversation. Mrs. Clem's house but the greater part of these share of remarks related to Dr. Duzan, a leading physician and a man of wealth with whom Mrs. Clem since she was a child, and had always been her family physician. Before her arrest Mrs. Clem had made up a statement of Dr. Duzan's business affairs, and at one time advanced her a large sum of money. Dr. Duzan's account during his transactions with Young would make a deposit of the same amount on the same day, and when Young would draw upon his bank balance Duzan's would be reduced to the same extent. It was the same with the bank accounts of Young and Duzan. Dr. Duzan swore in all he had done directly or indirectly Duzan's money had large money transactions with Young. He had given by borrowing small sums at short periods of seven to ten days, at high usury with interest before due, and telling Duzan that she was engaged in large speculations with leading business men in Indianapolis and that she would tell him all about it at the proper time. These loans increased from time to time advanced her $1,000 in small dollars for which she took receipts or memorandums. It frequently happened that on every day she would deposit the money from Duzan, Young would draw a deposit of like amount or pay it in cash.

It has been stated, $27,000 of Young's paper matured in bank on the 14th of September, 1873. Four or five days before that time, Mrs. Clem came to Duzan in great distress of mind and as he testified, with her butterly and begged him to lend her $22,000. Just at this time Duzan's bankers had become inquisitive concerning the use he was making of his money and upon his refusal to tell them, daily withdrew their accommodations. He informed Mrs. Clem that he could and her no longer. Young evidently loosed to her to provide the means to meet his maturing notes, and when she found it impossible to effect a loan from Duzan, she found herself at the end of the rope. She was compelled to close the account, and catching the nearest way she accompanied Young and his wife on their ride her brother (Silas) followed in a buggy with a gun purchased by Abrams, Young and his wife were murdered, and the murderers fled to Indianapolis, in the manner described Mrs. Clem was first tried in the fall of 1868, and but for the obstinacy of a German juror, who stood out for conviction against eleven for acquittal, she would have gone scot-free. Upon the second trial, she was convicted, and sentenced to the State prison for life. Her brother Silas, (who had testified in her behalf, and had been detected in a dozen perjuries concerning his whereabouts on the day of the murder) committed suicide in jail; the night of her conviction, by cutting his throat with a razor. Abrams was then tried and convicted of murder in the first degree—the proof of the purchase of the gun by him, a few hours before the murder, being clear (and conclusive, also, his dividing the money with Mrs. Clem after the murder.

The Supreme Court reversed the judgment against Mrs. Clem, and gave her a new trial, upon a shallow technicality that led many people to believe that the court had been corrupted. Her counsel took a change and she was tried the third time at Booth county, Ind. The trial resulted in a divided jury. The fourth and has just been concluded by a verdict with a sentence of imprisonment Thus has ended one of the most remarkable chapters in the history of the criminal jurisprudence of this country. We doubt the celebrated Webster case furnished a better illustration of the efficacy and the power of a connected chain of circumstantial evidence. At first it was pronounced that Mrs. Clem should have had to do with the murder of her two little by little the truth came to her guilt was so clearly revealed, intelligent mind could doubt it, after considering the facts.—Bench and Bober.
